

RE-ENCHANTMENT AND GRATITUDE DAY: POLLINATORS

We mark this day to honor Pollinators.

How you conduct Re-Enchantment and Gratitude Day is up to you and those you create with: It may be as simple as slowing down and giving a moment and a breath of presence as you greet and acknowledge the abundance and magic of pollination where you are.

Or you may choose to spend some time in pollinators,, set an intention, read a poem, sit and listen, deepen your knowledge, create an altar, or conduct a ceremony.

Invoke your own intuition and natural, inherent ritual intelligence.

Below is a simple blessing. It can be spoken out loud or silently. Feel free to shape it in a way that feels authentic to you. Part of the re-enchantment is speaking directly with our more-than-human kin, a RE-WHO-ing of the world of which we are but one type of person.

POLLINATOR GRATITUDE BLESSING

Blessed be the Pollinating Ones—bees and butterflies, bats and beetles, invisible hands of Wind.

Pollinator People, we honor you.

With this small offering of words and energy (perhaps with some pollen on the nose)

may you hear our gratitude.

*Beloved Bees, Beautiful Butterflies, Magnificent Moths
We celebrate you as one of Life's exquisite expressions.*

*We thank you for your faithful crossings,
golden dust upon your bodies,
your quiet exchanges that make fruit and seed and indeed, a future at all, possible.*

*Thank you for your buzzing wisdom, your flitting flirtations stitching together worlds—
flower to flower, day to night carrying what cannot travel alone.*

You do not hoard what you gather, but pass it on.

You teach us that life continues not through control, but through contact.

*That sweetness is shared
That beauty is in relationship
That even the gentlest touch can change everything.*

You remind us of our deep inter-dependence with the wider web of animacy.

May your gifts be seen, heard, felt and not taken for granted.

May you stay with us as neighbor, relative, and teacher, not object.

May you thrive and the community of Life you support continue to thrive.

May we remember your sacredness.

Pollinating Ones, thank you, we honor you.
